not office reckers, have become thoroughly dis- State. gusted, and are ready to adopt any plan that promises to give a full and fair expression of the party preference in the selection of candidates. The feeling exists equally in city and country, is not confined to any particular distriet or county, or to either political party -The delegate system has already been dropped in many of the heavy counties of the State by both parties, the Democrats taking the lead and substituting in place of Conventions the popular vote plan, and with satisfactory results. A number of the Republican Counties have taken the initiatory steps for making nominations this season by popular vote, among them Ashtabula, Delaware, and Medina, and the subject is being discussed in Geauga.

The primary election system has many advantages over the delegate plan. It rids the party of many evils attending conventions, which in numerous instances have become as serious as to render conventions the mere instrumen alities of cliques to hold or distribute offices. Packing has almost become synonimous with convention. The popular vote of the party in wards and townships removes the nomination of candidates as far as may be from the influence and management of wire-workers, and places it as nearly as possible in the free and unbiassed expression of the will of the people. Every voter of the party has a direct e in the selection of candidates, and he him when the power to nominate is conserved by a majority of his political friends on a few ward or township delegates. In the one case a defeat upon both. The vote is the largest his vote counts and tells—in the other delegates are usually manufactured by a few party managers to his hand. He therefore neglects the that much fradulent voting was perpetrated.—This is known to have been the case to a cerprimary meeting, feels indifferent to or dissatisfied with the ticket nominated, does little or nothing during the canvass, and in the end probably stays away from the polls, strikes off names, or votes an Opposition ballot. The voter feels that he had no hand in the nomination, and is willing that those who formed the ticket should elect it—if they can. The next election the same process of electing delegates completely disgusts him, for the same wires are noticed and the same familiar names and we shall not have so much cause to wonder. are pulled, and the same familiar names and managers accupy the stage. He now becomes such an independent voter that he cuts the This result, it is needless to say, has been whole ticket, and naturally drops into another party organization. In Ashtabula it is proposed that the Republians in each town elect for themselves a member to represent them in the Central Committee, who would then not only feel the obligation, but the authority to act for his township. The Central Committee thus chosen to appoint their own Chairman, and an Executive Committee of three or five members. It is thought this plan would conduce to harmony and effi-
